

5 Community Helper Activities with Free Coloring Pages

Gather the supplies

- ☐ Choose the Firefighter Bear or Doctor Bunny sample page
- ☐ One copy for each child who wants a page
- ☐ Crayons or pencils
- ☐ A few sheets of plain paper

The two one-page samples are free for your family or classroom. Print single-sided and check the preview so the whole drawing fits.

Follow the steps

- 1 Choose a helper and start a conversation

Show both pages and let the child choose. Ask: "What do you think this helper is doing today?" Follow their answer, point or story. A doctor helps with health; a firefighter helps in fires and other emergencies.
- 2 Color one part and tell its story

Invite the child to choose one part to color first. Ask: "Where is your helper going?" or "Who might they meet?" Leave room for their idea. They can talk while coloring or show the page afterward; unfinished parts can wait for another day.
- 3 Draw something the helper could use

On separate paper, draw a doctor's bag, a firefighter's helmet or an invented item. Ask what it does; write the child's explanation beside it if they want. Keep pretend tools on paper or use ordinary toys; real medicine and emergency equipment stay with adults.

Choose one page and one prompt for a short break; keep unfinished pages for another day.

Gather the supplies

- ☐ A few colors and plain paper
- ☐ A protective sheet underneath if using markers

For a preschool table, set out a few colors and plain paper. Children may color, draw or explain their idea in their own way. Keep unused pages for another day rather than making finishing the whole activity a goal.

Follow the steps

4 Act out a small helping moment

Use the picture for pretend play: a toy animal can visit a pretend doctor, or a firefighter can explain a helmet to a neighbor. Let the child choose a role; join in, then swap if they want. In a group, children can work in pairs or tell the scene with their drawings.

5 Make a little community display

Place finished or partly colored pages together on a table or wall. Invite each child to name their helper and share one thing happening in the picture. Add their words on a separate strip if they want a caption. Each picture can show its creator's own idea.
