

Halloween Classroom Coloring Station: One Simple Activity

Gather the supplies

- ☐ One printed page per child, plus a few spare copies
- ☐ A pencil for names and a folder for unfinished pictures
- ☐ Crayons or colored pencils in a shared cup
- ☐ Scrap paper underneath if you offer markers

> Print pages for your own family or class. Share the page link with other teachers instead of redistributing the PDF.

Follow the steps

1 Choose when the station will be used

Choose one setup before printing.

- Morning arrival: one sheet at each seat, colors within reach.
- Party station: set out only as many pages as comfortable seats; four seats for a class of 24 means six groups. Keep each group's sheets together.
- Early finishers: keep pages in a tray; a folder lets children return to the same picture later.

2 Pick a picture that gives children a choice

The ghost has a large open shape for a favorite color or invented pattern. The jack-o-lantern or maple leaf are alternatives.

- Ask: "Will your ghost have one color or a pattern?" Let two children describe their pictures without needing to match colors.

3 Print one copy before making the class set

Print the ghost single-sided on US Letter or fit to page for A4. Check one sheet for clipped edges first; use the printing guide if needed.

4 Make starting and stopping easy

Add names before coloring, keep the color cup between seats, and make a separate ready pile. Offer a blank sheet to an early finisher; place unfinished work in a folder. Completion is not the goal.

5 Choose a simple way to share the results

Each child chooses home or display. Replace pages and return crayons to the cup.
